

LITERARY NOTES.

The first English edition of Professor Bryce's "American Commonwealth"—one of 2,500 copies—is nearly exhausted. In this country it is said that 10,000 copies of the work have been sold. Mr. Bryce has lately revised it, and the new edition will appear in September.

Mr. George W. Childs's "Recollections"—parts of which have appeared in "Lippincott's Magazine"—will soon be published by the J. B. Lippincott Company.

Zola is said to be the best-paid novelist in France; Mrs. Humphry Ward has just been offered $5,000 for a story of 30,000 words, and John Strong Winter refused an offer of $2,500 for her next novella.

Lady Dufferin is going to publish part of the journal she kept in India while her husband was Governor-General. She will call her book "Our Vice-Regal Life in India."

Dan森's book on his journey in Greenland is nearly ready for publication in London. As soon as it appears he proposes to start out on a longer and more difficult expedition.

Mrs. Sutherland Orr, the author of a well-known book on Browning's poems, is a sister of Sir Frederick Leighton.

Tennyson's new poem will appear probably in September.

HOW I CONSULTED THE ORACLE OF THE GOLDFISHES.

From Lowell's New Poem in the Atlantic.

"Tis more than sixty years ago
Since first I watched you to-and-fro;
Two generations come and gone
From silence to oblivion.
With all their noisy strife and stress
Lived in the quiet of your presence,
While you inconsciously survive
Immovable almost more alive.

I watched you then as a curious boy,
When in your beauty found full joy,
And by my problem'd distrest
Sat at life's board a welcome guest.
You were my sister's pets, not mine,
But from your eyes I drew no thine,
No hint of impression drew
On any map my simpleminded knew;

O golden age, not yet detained!
What made me happy then?—you know,
With you to watch me, you my Lar,
Is dawning days my sun and stars,
And over you entranced I hung,
Too young to know what was young.
Gazing with still amaze and bliss,
I saw you took some shape like this:

"I have my world, and so have you,
A tiny universe for two,

A bubble by the ark blown,
Scattered on the ocean of our own.

Where you have all, a whale could wish,
Happy as Eden's primal fish.

Nain is done with you this day,
From you to find no shelter far away.

And still you snatch its softening crumb,
Nor more than we, think whence it comes.

No toll seems you, but to express
Your chosen path, and show where to shore;

Sometimes its limpid pools you sound,
As you trace its limits round.

Sometimes its hollows deep you show,
Sometimes its depths you sound,

Or hover motionless midway,

Like gold-red clouds at noon of day;

Fresh as the dawn, with sudden whim
Off to your globe's most distant rim,

Where, gauzed by the watery lens,
Methinks the dragon of the sea.

Flash of the lightning of the sky,
Borne by Sir Benvis or Sir Guy,

And the one eye that meets my view,
Lidless and strangely languishing, too,

That of the concordant darks,

Says, "I am the last; my single match
Whose a bellmentor lot is yours.

That have an own All-out-of-doors,

No words to spell, no suns to do,

No Neps and no parades,

How you to see, a thought,

Of such cross things as Must and Ought,

I too the happiest of boys

To see and share your golden joys!"
